

Everyone Gets a Partner

Monday Bags · ready-to-post captions

v1 — Direct ("come alone, on purpose")

Coming alone? That's the whole idea.

At Monday Bags you don't bring a partner — we draw you one. Walk in by yourself, get paired with a random teammate, and by your first throw you've already met someone. It's the easiest way to walk into a bar solo and leave with a crew.

Story cut: "Solo? Perfect. We draw you a partner at the door. Mondays, sign up by 7."

v2 — The "or bring your people" version

Show up alone. Or bring your people. Either way you're throwing.

Monday Bags pairs you with a random partner the second you put your name down — so a party of one and a party of six get the exact same welcome. No "do you have a team?" awkwardness. Just bags, a bracket, and a bar full of people who were strangers an hour ago.

Ten bucks in, Clover adds $50, winner takes the pot. Every Monday · 7:30 · 722 W Grand.

Story cut: "Come solo or roll deep — you get a partner either way. Mondays, 7:30."

v3 — Social proof framing (use once a real crowd exists)

Nobody here came with a partner. They left with one.

That's how the draw works — random teams, every Monday, so the room mixes instead of splitting into cliques. Come by yourself and you'll be on a team before your beer's cold.
